Relief Society Under Weigh

The executive committee met on Tuesday and the following business was done. George Simpson was appointed to receive and store for Belgium relief all donations of clothes. All persons, therefore, who have any clothes which they wish to give should leave them with Mr. Simpson. The secretary was instructed to inform the secretary of the Southern Alberta Patriotic Fund that there was a British reservist's wife in Claresholm. It was decided to postpone the suggested public meeting until a date on or before the 27th of October, partly on account of the state of the roads and partly because a speaker had not yet been procured. Mrs. McKinney and J. F. Reynolds were appointed a committee to supervise the local relief case of Mrs. Valesky.

Equity's Ghost Laid

The last chapter in the long-drawn-out tale of the affairs of the Canadian Society of Equity Limited will come to an end at the first meeting of the shareholders, to be held in the board of trade rooms October 16 at 10 o'clock in the morning.

The meeting will be held, says a circular sent out to shareholders, "for the purpose of receiving the statement of the liquidator and inspectors of the manner in which the company has been wound up, and of receiving any explanations which may be necessary, and particularly for the purpose of instructing the solicitors to apply to the court for the dissolution of the company."

"Sufficient money has now been collected for payment of all the creditors, and there is a balance on hand which will be distributed to those shareholders who have paid more than sufficient on their calls to meet the company's debts."

According to a statement made by one of the inspectors, about $4,000 will be available for distribution to those shareholders who have paid up in full the calls made on them, amounting altogether to about $16.50 on each share. This sum, divided among these shareholders, will, it is estimated, mean a share of about $2.00 to $2.50 per share.

Obit.

After an illness lasting but a few days, Paul Gustave Walters, aged 26 years and six months, died on Tuesday, October 6th, at 9 a.m. He had been assisting Mrs. John Robertson with the farm work and had not been feeling ill. On Sunday he complained of pain and took to his bed. His mother made her way with great difficulty through the drifted mounds to Mrs. Robertson's, and was with her son to the last. This is a heavy blow to Mrs. Walters as her husband died but three months ago. Paul was born in the city of Philadelphia and was in Seattle for seven years engaged as engineer in a saw-mill. He was a steady, industrious young man and will be missed very much by his mother and his brother and sisters. The funeral on Thursday took place under difficulty owing to the state of the roads and the body was interred from the mortuary room of the local undertaker. The sympathy of the entire neighborhood goes out to Mrs. Walters in her double bereavement.

Resume of the Present War

(The advertiser publishes with pleasure this compilation of Charles Lydell, of the Claresholm Public School, which was given high commendation by his teacher, the assistant principal of the school.—Ed.)

The German aim at the beginning of the war, was to capture Paris in three weeks time and then to turn and defeat the Russian army. They had not counted on the British army and navy taking a part in it; the second thought of the Germans was that there would be rebellions in India and Canada against the British crown.

Years ago Germany and England each signed a treaty saying they would respect Belgium's neutrality, but when Germany broke the treaty, England was forced to war on Germany.

At the beginning, the allies gave way to the German advance, and the Kaiser's War Machine marched gradually nearer to Paris.

When the Germans entered Belgium, they attacked the fortified city of Liege. Here they threw their men against the forts in large bodies until, after a weeks strenuous fighting, they captured the forts with a loss of about twenty-eight thousand men. This and the attack on the Belgian army at Haenel were had setbacks to the Germans and spoilt their plans.

While the army of Belgium was holding the Germans in check, the British army and navy were mobilized and sent to the front.

The next engagement was at Charleroi, where the Allies fell back in order to keep their line from being pierced by the invaders. A little fought at Mons was somewhat similar to that of Charleroi, as the allies gradually giving the Germans a little ground.

After these battles, the Germans had a straight march to Paris, and they began to take advantage of it; but when they were only a few hours march from their goal, the Germans began to retreat towards their own country. The allies followed as far as the Aisne river, where the Germans once more turned to fight.

This last battle of the Aisne has been raging for a month and the allies have made slight gains against the enemy.

The fighting is not confined to Belgium and France, for over two million Russians are invading Austria and Germany. Their progress through Austria has been very rapid and they have captured Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, while in Germany, their advance is more strongly opposed.

On the sea the British navy has bottled up the German navy in the Helles River and the Kiel Canal. One night about a month ago, a submarine and torpedo boat flotilla attacked the German squadron at Heligoland and sank eleven ships.

The war is not confined to Europe, for in Africa and islands where the Germans have control, they are being attacked with success by the British. In China the Germans are being attacked by the Japanese.

British colonies the world over have given assistance in soldiers and supplies.

May Go to the Country

Winnipeg, Oct. 13.—A special to the Free Press from Montreal, says the British government has decided to appeal to the country and that elections are to be held Nov. 19.

Govt Grants Plebiscite

The Alberta legislature is now in session. The monster prohibition petition which was presented by the Alberta Temperance and Moral Reform League contained 23,650 signatures, representing 27 per cent from the 54 electoral districts. The lowest percentage reported was 34 per cent in St. Albert, a French constituency in the north. The highest percentage was from Acadia, Newton being next with 67 1/2. Claresholm is credited with 44 and in justice to our own constituency it is only right to say that through some oversight only ten of 16 sub-divisions were canvassed, Granum and the southern part not being represented in the petitions. This had the effect of bringing the Claresholm constituency eighth in the list instead of perhaps, the topmost of all. It is generally agreed that the government will grant a plebiscite next about June 15th of next year. The total vote of 1913 was 87,624.

Day of Intercession

By special request of the bishop of the diocese, Sunday next, October 18th, will be observed in St. John's Church as a Day of Intercession with Almighty God on behalf of His Majesty's naval and military forces, now engaged in this dreadful war. There will be a Celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a.m. and Evening Prayer at 7.30 p.m., with an appropriate address together with special hymns and prayers. A special appeal is made to all church people to attend at least one of these services.

May Divide Conference

At the Methodist General Conference recently held in Ottawa, the general conference special committee was empowered during the quadrennium to divide the Alberta conference into two or more conferences if in the judgment of the Alberta conference it be in the interest of the work.

Entertained at Lethbridge

Miss Winnifred Walt, Edmonton, entertained in honor of Miss Frank of Toronto, who was on her way to Claresholm to take charge of the domestic science department in the school of agriculture. The invited guests were former O.E.C. girls from Whittier, Ontario, the alumnus of Miss Walt and Miss Frank.—The Lethbridge Herald.

Miss Myrtle Hayward, the instructor in household science at the School of Agriculture, has taken up permanent residence at the home of R. S. Brerton. Miss Frank arrived this week to assume the position of assistant in household science and will make her home with Mrs. R. E. Moffatt.

The Lethbridge Herald has an enquiry from Bore Island as to whether the government is protecting the farmers against all seizure of stock and implements held under lien note or chattel mortgage. In reply we would say that the provincial government is introducing a bill at Edmonton, leaving at the discretion of the sheriff action on cases of this kind. Under this act the sheriff can withhold seizure if the circumstances warrant.

Hang Trouble

"Hang trouble!" Care killed a cat. This is the motto of that ducky band of forty comprising Richards & Pringles' Famous Georgia Minstrels.

No sooner is the curtain up on the palatial First Part, "Evening" (which one critic has been kind enough to say is the most beautiful ever carried by a minstrel company), than the fun starts and continues in a variable whirlwind for two and one-half hours.

The minstrels believe there is trouble, worry and care enough in the average person's daily life to leave it all behind when they enter the theatre; and the cleverest comedians and skilled producers have vied with each other to make the program offered by this company an endless chain of mirth, music, laughter and song.

Have they succeeded? Well, ask the manager of your theatre to see the press notices he has received about them from other cities.

There will be a big street parade at noon, and a band concert by the company's band of twenty-five solo musicians at 7.30 o'clock in the evening in front of the theatre. The date of this company's appearance at the Claresholm Opera House, is Friday, Oct. 23rd.

Card of Thanks

Mrs. Chas Walters would take this means of expressing her thanks to the many kind friends who offered condolences and tendered their kindly assistance to herself and family during the illness and death of her son, Paul. She would especially mention her appreciation of the kindness of Mrs. John Robertson, at whose home her son passed away. On behalf of herself and her family she is very grateful.

Local Farmers Score Wins

Western Canadian exhibitors at the 1914 session of the Dry Farming congress, which has just been concluded at Wichita, Kansas, swept everything before them in the grain classes. They captured the premier honors for their exhibits of wheat, oats, barley and flax, thereby demonstrating that the grain from western Canada is the best on the American continent. Sagar Wheeler, of Rosburn, Saskatchewan, captured first prize for the best bushel of marquis wheat, first prize for the best flax and also the sweepstake prize for the best marquis wheat.

For the third year in succession, Nick Taittinger, of Claresholm, Alberta, captured the sweepstake for barley, while the Metherwell cup, given for the best exhibit of grain and grasses, was awarded to the province of Saskatchewan.

Western Canada also won first prize for the best bushel of oats, and the sweepstake in the oats class.

Here another comment is very fitting. J. L. Salmon, of Claresholm, won the prize offered for best wheat at the Irrigation Congress in Calgary last week, winning over men who have become professional exhibitors. Mr. Salmon's win of the $100 prize is more notable as he had not taken the pains in preparing his exhibit which is usual. With Mr. Salmon's and Mr. Taittinger's enterprise, Claresholm district is securing some valuable advertising.

District Scope Not Town Alone

The Patriotic organization recently organized in Claresholm is a district one, a large representation of the farmers of the district being on the committee. There should be movements on foot in every schoolhouse and farm centre. Teach patriotism and the truths of liberty by reading the central fund. In the distribution of the proceeds of the patriotic fund there should have been some direct acknowledgment of the work and claims of the Canadian Red Cross.

Patriotic at Meadow Creek

An entertainment, supper, and dance in aid of the Canadian Patriotic Fund will be held at the Meadow Creek school house on Friday, Oct. 24th at 8 p.m. There will be a program of fine music and the ladies will provide supper.

Won Four Straight

It is the unexpected which always happens, they say. The first World's Championship baseball series to be won four straight, has happened. Boston won Friday, the score 7 to 1, the second on Saturday with a score of 4 to 0 the third on Monday, a twelve-inning game, score 5 to 4, the fourth and final on Tuesday, 3 to 1.

Counsels Patience

The pressure of job work and advertising kept our reduced staff so long, the local personal column is conspicuous by its absence. A gallery of "japs" in our office accounts for this in part. We expect another printer for next week which will give the editor a chance to attend to the office and news end as of old. Our readers will be patient, we know.

Wonders of Plant Life.

We are told by Darwin in his "Origin of Species" that in the month of February of a certain year he took three table-spoonsful of mud from three different places beneath the surface of the water of a small pond, which mud weighed only six and three-quarter ounces and was all contained in a breakfast cup. He kept it covered up in his study for six months and during this period obtained from it the astonishing number of 701 plants.

On Nov. 13, 1912, he planted a patch of soil taken from a hedge root of about twenty-eight inches in length by about eleven inches in width and about two and a half inches deep, and he expected to take a note of the number of plants which should grow from naturally contained in it. By Nov. 15, 1912, he had removed from time to time, as they showed themselves, 123 plants, and by Nov. 15, 1912, 615 more, or for the two years 738 plants in all.

A Culinary Experiment.

The friends of a certain distinguished professor recently gathered in his laboratory for a chat in the evening, says the Boston Herald. Generally they found him kindly engaged in some experiment.

One evening, when two friends called, they found the professor leaning anxiously over a spirit lamp, on which a small pot was bubbling.

"What's come out of the chalice, what is it tonight?"

"Gossip," murmured the professor, "gossip!" asked the other.

"No."

"Humorism?" asked the other.

"No."

"Spurious?" asked the other.

"No."

The others ran the scale of literary exorcisms as far as they knew it. Then one of them said:

"Well, we give it up! What is it?"

The professor smiled blandly. "Spices!"

Day and His Lamp.

Jan. 9, 1913, saw in the pages of an English coin mine near Newcastle a little drama in which there were but two actors—the one a clergyman, the other a miner. The latter was busily picking out the coal by the light of a "steel nite" which he saw approaching him a light. The other tossed the miner's nature of the pit and shouted at the light, but to no effect was taken when prayers took the place of mine. The newsmen was the Rev. John Hodgson, rector of Jarwar, and he had in his hand the first day's copy of his lamp, now safely housed in the Museum of Practical Science in Jersey street, London. Sir Humphrey Davies, when urged to retire, replied: "It might undoubtedly enable me to put four loaves in my carriage, but what could it avail me to have it said that Sir Humphrey drives his carriage and now brought at the expense of mine?"

Tenn on a Terror.

At the time when rumors of the probable marriage of the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise were floating about London, Tennison had upon a number of guests at luncheon among whom was the Marquis of Lorne. In the course of talk the marquis told Tennison, a Scotchman, that the queen liked his new volume.

"I am glad to hear it," Tennison said to his sources, show Tennison his voice. "I have given a good account of her in that book, but the newspapers didn't like my time, and they are not. I live in terror," he continued, "of any of my friends writing anything and of hearing from her that she has no more of that kind yet, but I live in terror of it."

This is a somewhat risky wink.

When the Worn Turned.

Recently a man omitted to have his tailor a few checks of silver in exchange for good tape, and after waiting a reasonable length of time the tailor party sent for the amount of the bill.

Thus it was that he found himself in a predicament. In his pocket he had a half-sovereign, and he was in a hurry to get out of the shop. He looked at the tailor and said: "No, sir," and he was the proud possessor of a half-sovereign.

"No, sir," said the tailor, with a satisfied air. "And why not, please?"

"Because," came the answer of the man, "in your case it would have been a coin turned."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

A clergyman took down a small volume.

"This is called," he said, "the 'Instructions of Pin-a-Buck.' It is one of the very oldest religious writings known to us. It is a collection of advice to husbands, and that is why it is called 'Pin-a-Buck.' And to read it."

"If that will be useful to my house?"

"Who thy wife ever read?"

"No, sir, she never read it."

Explaining the Antelope.

With these they took for a short time a historic cattle near Toronto, installing a venerable old man to play the part of owner. After the bargain was made, the man took the antelope to London, and while he was eating the meat the real antelope was replaced by the real antelope.

His Race For Life

A Story of the Sahara Desert

By CLARISSA MACRIE

Paul Dunlap belted his racing camel and turned around to glance his pursuers.

Far behind, there among the sand dunes of the Algerian desert, were the black dunes of the Sahara, and not among the dunes, nor rising to view and again meeting from right behind some protecting bluff of sand.

Paul pushed sharply to his breast, and the camel shook his hooves hard, and with rattling of red leather and silver, and without apparent exertion thrust forward at a moment's notice the rate of speed.

For the first time Paul had turned around, and each time that Paul turned around his pursuers still held the same distance. Although some of them were mounted on dead Arabian horses, not one had apparently gained an inch of the race.

It was late afternoon when Paul sighted the blue blur that marked the tracks of the camels. At first thought it was a mirage, but at last he was convinced that indeed he was approaching dead, food and water. He was weary with twenty hours of hard riding, he had not eaten, and he had not slept, and only occasionally had he swallowed water from his flask.

Water was very precious, and he must make it last.

Now with the oasis in sight he could draw the flask and swallow the water.

A fat dromedary near his shoulder nudged him that his enemies had given up the pursuit for the moment. Alarmed, they were making a dash for it, so that they might rest and get their horses ready to continue the chase after the first moon had risen to loom the desert with light.

The camels were a small one, but it presented a good wall of water.

the Bedouins made preparations to take him to their encampment.

At this time the Bedouins had him taken to their tent. The riding band of Arabs had secured the opportunity to rob him, and he was covered with his life. He would be lucky.

Well, he had managed to escape from the hands of his pursuers, and he was now a free man. Just as the black shadows of the desert came down upon him Paul had discovered his camel mounted a dead Arabian horse, and was a mile away before his pursuers could catch up.

If he could circle around to the north and then return to his starting point, the city of Ghazal would be within his grasp. He was sure that he was positive that with another guide, perhaps a little boy, he could successfully accomplish his projected trip across the desert.

In fact, he must accomplish it. He had made an arrangement to sell the photographs, together with an account of his journey across the desert, to a prominent American magazine, and he could not afford to lose the money. He had promised to deliver the first batch of photographs on the 1st of March, and now it was the 1st of March, and he must deliver them.

For the first time Paul had turned around, and each time that Paul turned around his pursuers still held the same distance. Although some of them were mounted on dead Arabian horses, not one had apparently gained an inch of the race.

It was late afternoon when Paul sighted the blue blur that marked the tracks of the camels. CRISIS IN INDIA.

Dr. State of Affairs Laid In The

A crisis, monetary, industrial and political, now prevails in India. As a result, the people of this vast empire are suffering from a severe depression.

The people of the Bank of India, which has been in existence for more than two years ago, has been in a state of depression for some time. The bank has been in a state of depression for some time.

The consequence of it has been a run on the bank of considerable proportions on all those other institutions and undertakings in which native capital has been invested. In recent years, crippling their resources and in many cases compelling them to go out of business.

Even so loyal a champion of British rule as Sir Jamsetji Jeejeebhoy, fifth baronet of his line and acknowledged leader of the imperial and British community of Bombay, in Hindustan, has telegraphed from London to the Secretary of State for India in London declaring that he would not support the British Government in the Imperial Government in India.

The good will toward them on the part of the British Government is not to be brought to understand how it is that Great Britain, which has been the greatest benefactor of the Indian people, should be so generally discredited.

The Wonderful Feast of Lucullus at Which Sir Maudslayi, Dressed as a Cook, Was Found to Be a

In this era of the high cost of living, it is interesting to turn back the pages of history and see what the world of the past had to eat.

The fact that though the children of Israel had been more than a Pharaoh's land they were always eating for the despots of Egypt was a lesson well for the Egyptian food. The cabbage was one of the favorite foods of the ancient Egyptians, and it became an object of worship.

The cookery of ancient Greece was very simple, although at one time the Athenians were famous for their cooking. The Athenians were famous for their cooking, and they were famous for their cooking.

The Greeks, nevertheless, raised their food to a high level. In a fragment of an old Greek comedy a cook is seen to be a very important person. The cook is seen to be a very important person.

Paul watched the camel, satisfied his own thirst and plucked some dates and filled his saddlebags with more of the desert fruit. He filled his flask with the cold water and also drank a glass of water but he thought it was a waste of the water.

CRISIS IN INDIA.

WAR COURAGE

MANY a man in Canada, willing to go a-warring across the seas, is unwilling to fight at home—against the shadowy foes of bad times or of business depression.

This is a time in Canada when Canadian business men should fight—to capture new trade and to hold old trade. To stop one's advertising is to withdraw a powerful offensive and defensive force, and to expose one's business without a guard.

If the courage of manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers—the generals and captains of trade in industry—fails, the courage of the nation will ebb.
